DANIEL ISLAND, S.C. – After winning the 2019 Volvo Car Open in April, Madison Keys has committed to defending her title in 2020. Next year's event will be Keys' eighth consecutive Charleston tournament. The 2020 Volvo Car Open will take place April 4 – 12 on Daniel Island in Charleston, SC.

"Madison's win in Charleston this year was something our fans have been rooting for since she started competing in the Volvo Car Open in 2013," said Eleanor Adams, Volvo Car Open Tournament Manager. "Her personality shines when she plays and our fans have loved watching her grow up on our courts. We're ecstatic that she'll be back in 2020 to defend her well-deserved title."

Keys holds a 16-6 record in Charleston, where she captured the title in 2019, reached the semifinals in 2018 and was a finalist in 2015.

Her 2019 season also includes a quarterfinal appearance at the French Open and fourth round berth at the Australian Open. In addition, she was a member of the US Fed Cup team. The 24-year-old has remained in the WTA's top 20 for the past five seasons.

"Winning the Volvo Car Open after coming so close in the past was the most amazing feeling," said Keys. "Charleston has always been one of my favorite tournaments and being able to win the title was such a special moment. I'm excited to come back next year to play in front of the best fans around."

Keys was awarded a key to the City of Charleston by Charleston Mayor John Tecklenburg during the singles final trophy presentation. The Volvo Car Open also honored her with the 2019 Player Who Makes A Difference award for her work with the anti-bullying nonprofit, Fearlessly Girl.

The Volvo Car Open will celebrate its 20th year in Charleston in 2020. The tournament relocated to Charleston from Hilton Head Island, where it was held from 1973 – 2000.
